Library Journal Reviews:

A German soldier straggles home from World War I, marries his best friend's pregnant widow, then picks up a set of butcher knives and heads for North Dakota, where he finds a singing club and encounters the passionate Delphine Watzka. If anyone can make a butcher sing, it's Erdrich.

Harper Collins Reading Guide:

Bracketed by the two world wars, Erdrich's multi-generational, character-rich story chronicles a group of ordinary small-town denizens as they encounter the extraordinary events--both in their insular world and in the larger world, too--that come to define their lives.
